

The cause of the wrongly convicted people.

Made by: Kelcey B. Cyanne D. Alexandria G.

Investigations

The story on my investigations starts when I did the 14 sources. I did multiple case studies which all came from The National Registry of Exonerations. These case studies helped me learn more about wrongful convictions and what they go through. Gathering all of the information took awhile but at the same time I was being enlightened by the sheer amount of information I found. Answering the research questions over and over for each source helped to make me realize a pattern in the 14 sources efficiently.

Investigations

My investigations consisted of realizing that a multitude of the crimes are targeted against the wrong people. The harm inflicted on the families of wrongful conviction of the individuals will damage the family relationships over time since someone is locked up. Most of the imprisonments that are the cause of someone being convicted are mainly due to false accusations. Making a false accusation on an innocent person can destroy mental health, career, social isolation, and long term trauma. This experience may severe emotional distress. The racial injustice in the law of accusing the wrong people based on their color further reinforces stereotypes for the people for people who want to believe the wrong thing. From 2010-2026 black Americans consistently faced higher prison incarnations than other races based on a set of data I found.

Investigations

During my investigations I made it mandatory to add in how being wrongfully incarcerated can fully change someone's life. Regarding that I included quotes from court document that stated how the family was affected in the current situation. I also included the statistics from a variety of databases to support my claim that the laws around wrongful incarceration needs to change. Well, also, including the reason why they need to change. The laws changing can lower the percentage of wrongful incarcerations that happen.

The actions

My action was to write a letter for the service learning project to my state representative. I used my sources to help my letter and strengthen it so that I would be able to get him to work to change the current laws in place.

The actions

The process I took to complete my project wasn't complicated in any way. While in school I planned and mapped out different ways I could incorporate ethos, pathos, and logos into my letter to my state representative to make it persuasive. The first way I did this through adding how the family of the wrongfully convicted are affected in the end. Secondly I added the statistics on how many wrongful convictions happen because of our government system. Lastly I added the way wrongful convictions can be prevented by implementing new laws.

The actions

The action took was to include as much evidence in my letter as I could and make a reasonable statement about the unjust laws happening. I wanted to show and persuaded people into taking the statement and evidence seriously as possibly. I wanted to give recognition of the fact that wrongful conviction can make an impact the the mental minds of the victims and cause PTSD to them as well, this isn't really as serious in other country. It is a bad possibly that it can cause people to take the wrong turn in life.

The Impact

The impact that this project will have on the community is tremendous. This project will really show the community that wrongful convictions is a really major concept that people in around the world should take seriously. Many people across the globe have been wrongfully and no one knows. Wrongful convictions aren't taken seriously in multiple countries. Everyone is worried about other convictions but this one needs addressing the most. The total amount of years that every case has accumulated is around 5,000 years in total.

The Impact

The impact to show the how wrong conviction can led to destruction of a person's life and life-long bias. If wrongful convictions end than this can prevent unjust actions to not be as preventable as time goes. This will lower the risk of racial injustice as well and keep the community a safer place for everyone. This will ensure a safer future as possible.

The Impact

This project can have a strong impact for many different people. If the laws around wrongful convictions change then it can prevent it from happening in the future. This prevents people from living in fear of being held responsible for a crime they didn't commit. This improves the safety of the innocent in communities.

Changes in Laws

Changes in law that can be made recording to prevent false confessions. Legal speakers to share all evidence, police interrogation tactics to prevent future injustices. Reforms are aiming to remove or extend strict time limits for presenting new evidence.

Changes in Laws

We must improve eyewitness testimony and identification procedures. We can also expand the use of DNA in cases.

Changes in Laws

The changes I found mainly focus on increasing access to evidence and improving investigative accountability. They also call for strengthening the counsel for post-conviction. This will make it easier to overturn unjust conviction and help the innocent.

Changes in Laws

The change in laws can prevent the high percentage of wrongful convictions. It'll prevent wrongful conviction because the new laws will close the weak points in the system we have currently. A change in laws will make it easier to differentiate the wrong from the right.
